Prométhée

Prométhée Earth Intelligence offers augmented geo-intelligence solutions for strategic information production from Earth observation. The company designs and operates the JAPETUS constellation of intelligent optical satellites, which provides very high-resolution imagery and intra-daily revisit capabilities. They also develop EOP, an aggregative geospatial intelligence platform, and GaIA, an AI-powered GEOINT analysis engine. These systems enable the aggregation, correlation, and real-time analysis of spatial, terrestrial, and multi-domain data to anticipate risks, detect weak signals, and support critical decisions. Prométhée's solutions are designed for hyper-reactivity, including reactive programming and information processing within 15 minutes. Their offerings address risk management for climate and environmental issues (floods, wildfires, landslides, earthquakes, droughts, land degradation, resource management), territorial and infrastructure security (border control, illegal gold mining, terrain analysis), and protection of seas and oceans (illegal, unreported, and unregulated fishing, illicit trafficking, maritime route security). Customers include public and private decision-makers and operational personnel in areas such as maritime surveillance, critical infrastructure protection, natural resource surveillance, and security and defense.

This profile is generated from the live NewSpace Market catalogue. Specifications are as published by the manufacturer; every product links to a page where a request for quotation reaches the company directly.
